

Carly Buxton, PhD

Author | Researcher | Speaker

Magnetic Communications-specific bio

A. Carly Buxton, PhD, is an author, researcher, and speaker who helps people communicate with clarity, authority, and human presence in an AI-mediated world. Her work blends communication science, cross-cultural research, and practical teaching tools to support leaders, educators, and teams as they navigate modern communication challenges. Her latest book Magnetic Communication offers a research-backed approach to audience-centered, trust-building professional communication.

She is based in Richmond, Virginia and is available for in-person or virtual engagements.

Standard Bio

Dr. Carly Buxton is an author, researcher, and educator who focuses on communication in the AI age. She teaches Business Communication at the University of Richmond, where her frameworks for clarity and professional presence help students and leaders communicate with impact in a noisy world. With a background spanning East Asian Studies, sociology, UX research, product development, and the arts, Carly has conducted ethnographic research in Japan, led qualitative studies on collaboration and trust, and coached executives and entrepreneurs on authentic communication.

She is the founder of The Buck Stone Institute for Voice & Culture. The Institute's arms—The Salon for Voice & Culture, Buck Stone Studio, and The Magnetic Communication Lab—reflect Carly's commitment to inspiring respectful curiosity across cultures, helping people see the world through multiple viewpoints, and fostering empathy and global citizenship. Her forthcoming book, Magnetic Communication: Speaking and Writing with Professional Impact (Bloomsbury Academic), translates her research on trust and authenticity into a practical guide for modern professionals.

Carly lives in Richmond, Virginia, where she enjoys shifting gears across teaching, writing, creative ventures, tennis, and the chaos of parenting.

Booking & Inquiries:

carlybuxton.com

annecarlton@gmail.com

